

Wat is 'n kerkmark sonder pannekoek?

Die jaarlikse Fynbos-wintermark is onlangs weer gehou. Die mark is in die NG kerk se saal in 1ste Laan, Kleinmond, tot Saterdag 6 Julie gehou. Die mark het pragtige handgemaakte produkte soos leerbeursies, kinderklere, Belgiese sjokolade, juwele en vele meer verkoop. Hannah Louw, Anita Hattingh en Laura Blom het pannekoek gebak. From making coffins to coffee

William Chiwara, born in Zimbabwe, never imagined his life would turn out the way it is today.

He is now the proud owner of his very own coffee shop in Kleinmond called the Natural Health Coffee Shop. Before moving to South Africa in 2008, Chiwara worked in a hardware store for five years, where he was making coffins and doors, and sometimes worked as a salesman. His love for the hospitality industry later developed when he worked in a bed-and-breakfast in Johannesburg, where he gained much knowledge and experience – and this is where his journey started. “I then relocated to Cape Town, where I got a job as a runner at a restaurant and became acquainted with the local coffee roaster,” he says. Chiwara explains that he became very interested in what the coffee roaster was doing and received the opportunity to work alongside him. As time went on Chiwara received another job opportunity – working at the Cattle Baron Grill & Bistro, where he requested he work night shift only so he could pursue his passion, coffee roasting, during the day. “I really enjoyed that time of my life, and sometimes I still miss it,” he said. The coffee roaster saw Chiwara’s potential and love for making coffee, and decided to assist him in making his dream of owning his own coffee shop come true. As the years went by Chiwara moved to Kleinmond and seized the opportunity to open his shop next door to the town’s gym in the industrial area. He had already built up a big client base among those who went to the gym, before moving to Main Road, where his shop is now more visible. Not only does he make great coffee, but also health smoothies and juices. “I make use of fresh produce in all my smoothies, and still source my coffee from Kamili Khaya,” says Chiwara. William makes all his customers feel instantly welcome when they enter the Natural Health Coffee Shop. Chiwara, loved by the community, says his dream is to expand across South Africa.
